David Hughes, Martin Davis, Veronica Matthew, Nicholas Smith : Cases and Materials on Housing Law (Cases materials) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Cases and Materials on Housing Law (Cases materials):

Housing law can increasingly be viewed as the product of both housing and social welfare policies. As such it deals with the poor and vulnerable in society and largely ignores owner occupation to concentrate mainly on rented accommodation - much of it owned by local authorities and housing trusts. This is a comprehensive selection of materials on housing law. The leading cases and statutes are linked together with comments, notes and questions to ensure an effective springboard for stimulating discussion. The book includes cases such as "Bruton v. London and Quadrant Housing Trust".

About the Author Professor David Hughes is Professor of Housing and Planning at De Montfort University; Martin Davis is Principal Lecturer in Law at De Montfort University specialising in welfare law; Veronica Matthew is Principal Lecturer in Law at De Montfort University specialising in welfare issues and CABX; and Nicholas Smith is a Lecturer at Leicester University and teaches housing law as part of the postgraduate Welfare Law Programme.
