From Springer : Children in Tort Law, Part I: Children as Tortfeasors (Tort and Insurance Law) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Children in Tort Law, Part I: Children as Tortfeasors (Tort and Insurance Law):

This volume answers a variety of questions about damage caused by children. Are children directly liable and is there any age limit below which they have no tortious capacity? Can children, in spite of their lack of tortious capacity, for reasons of equity be held liable in exceptional conditions? What is the relationship between liability of children and liability of their parents or guardians? Are these questions answered by special rules of general application in all fields of tort liability or are there specific rules for specific torts? The book includes reports from 11 EU Member States and from Russia and a comparative analysis.

About the Author Miquel Martin-Casals is Full Professor of Civil Law and Director of the Institute of European and Comparative Private Law at the University of Girona.
