David Feldman : Civil Liberties and Human Rights in England and Wales before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Civil Liberties and Human Rights in England and Wales:

Written by one of the most highly respected academics on this field, this authoritative textbook provides a detailed account of the English law of civil liberties and human rights. It takes full account of the jurisprudence of the European Convention on Human Rights; discusses key legislation such as the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and analyses key cases including the conjoined twins and various cases involving immigrants and prisoners. The result is a coherent, detailed and comprehensive text for students and a valuable reference work for practitioners, and those interested in the protection of human rights and individual freedoms.

'An excellent book which will rapidly become the authoritative text in this field.' Steven Greer, University of Bristol
'An excellent and timely addition to available texts.' Richard de Friend, University of Kent
'Excellent overall review of all the ground likely to be covered in a Civil Liberties course. The author is to be congratulated on the enormous width of the knowledge transmitted ... Very well written; very interesting.' P.R. Gandhi, University of Reading
'The best book on the subject on the market. In fact, the only book!' Dr Satvinder Singh Juss, University of Westminster
'One of the few books to deal with the philosophical concepts and the substantive law.' Mr M.J. Kemble, Manchester Metropolitan University
'An excellent combination of a sound exposition of the subject together with a stimulating theoretical commentary - most textbooks should be cast in this mould !' Andrew Halpin, University of Southampton
'Excellent book and much-needed bringing together of a very diverse and complicated area of UK and international law. Very good for placing many diverse elements in context of larger picture.' Ruth Kirby, Institute of Education
'Excellent.' Anne Griffiths, University of East London
'This is an excellent work of scholarship filling a significant gap in the market - and competitively priced.' Professor S H Bailey, University of Nottingham
'It is an excellent and stupendous effort.' Professor Clive Walker, University of Leeds
