Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations : Improving Gender Equity in Access To Land (FAO Land Tenure Notes) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Improving Gender Equity in Access To Land (FAO Land Tenure Notes):

This guide has been prepared to support non-governmental organizations that are working to promote more equitable access to land for women and men in rural communities. In most societies, access to land has favoured certain individuals and groups at the expense of others. Women are one of the groups that often have fewer and weaker rights to land. The guide addresses gender relations and how their structure affects access to land. It presents strategies to improve gender equity by evaluating the current situation to identify what gender issues exist, by informing people of their rights to land, and by working to empower the marginalized.
